What do your SCC numbers mean on the Herd Summary:

Production Averages – Quality (Right hand side)

- A. Raw SCC - The Raw SCC is weighted by pounds of milk, this value should be very similar to the bulk tank test. Unless high SCC cows or quarters are excluded from the bulk tank, then bulk tank will be lower.
- B. SCC LS – Herd average linear SCC may be compared to previous months, especially the preceding month and the same month one year earlier. An increase in SCC score indicates that subclinical mastitis is becoming increasingly more common and severe.
- C. Number infections - Cows are considered infected if the Raw SCC is over 200,000. New infections occur when a cow is now infected and was not infected at the previous test.
- D. Fresh infections - Count of fresh cows this test that are infected.
- E. Number new infections - Count of cows over 200 this test that were under 200 last test including fresh cows
- F. Percent New Infections – Percent of total infections that are new this test.

Effects of Percent New Infections on Herd SCC:

- 4-7% lowers SCC
- 8-12% maintains current SCC
- >15% increases SCC

This herd’s overall SCC will be increasing in the future and may decrease production as well.
